It's also ahistorical. McCall has benefited from close ties to Cuomo for close to two decades at least. This "onetime enemy says it's important enough to elect Cuomo" narrative is entirely that- Cuomo's narrative

Here's where I think you're wrong. Those folks may also stick with Adams. He's literally been about this stuff his entire administration but because reporters are getting direct memos from Cuomo's campaign staff, you're saying it like it's brand new.

Cuomo benefits from the significant red-shift among low-income/immigrant communities in the outer boroughs. I could see his Asian/South Asian support jump--those voters resent Lander for his stance on the Specialized High Schools, and Siliwa swung a few districts in 2021.

It's almost as if reporters are paid to be infuriated & create controversy instead of the news. Adams has focused on migrant issues and crime his entire administration whereas Cuomo has supporter much more liberal policies on those issues.

If you really focused on reporting the news or even responding to it, you would've focused on the fact that most of the issues that real New Yorkers care about which are not the issues being raised on Twitter Adams has been very conservative on his entire administration.
